A CANDIDATE.

During the recess a candidate for public favor was pointed out to us in the person of Mr. Rufus Maxwell, of Tucker county an ex-Democrat, a nice looking Granger-person of 55 years, who wore a broad-pin straw hat, carried a cane, looked serious, and was a self-announced candidate of the "Industrial party" for Congress. An old gentleman of 81 years, sitting contemplatively on one of the back seats, was also pointed out, who had served in the lold Virginia Legislature in his day, and who was designated by our informant as one of the lone steat men in the world—as honest, said he, "as honest John Hubbard, your candidate for Congress in the First District."

As time wore on and the Committee on Resolutions did not appear, word came from below, where they were in session, hat the committee was in labor on the Greenback resolution of Mr. Farnsworth, and that that Honorable gentleman was making himself heard and felt on the sub-ject. This being the case, the Convention, to soothe its impatience, called on Chairman Flick for a speech, and just as he had risen to comply and ejaculated the first the Summit House to sentence or two there was a commotion at the door and the whisper of "they come" — "they come." This afforded a pretext -"they come." This afforded a pretex that the honorable chairman did not hes speech, and so he sat down and the convention indulged in a further short spell of waiting. At last, however, the committee came, and the chairman, Senator Jones, sent up to the secretary the following slightly abridged edition of the platform adopted at Moundsville by the Republican Congressional Convention of the
